iPad For:
• Entertainment
• Participation in games
• Engaging activities to talk about with other Communication systems
• Focus of Interaction
• Literacy
• Practice of Academic Concepts
• Hand play

Not Yet Sufficient to be a Child’s Main System for Communication
• Limited Robustness of Language Structure
• Lack of Features that Enhance Efficiency of AAC on “High Tech”
• Limited symbol systems available
• Access Methods Very Limited - no eye-gaze input

Apps for AAC by Jane Farrall

Switch Accessible Apps for iPad/ iPhone (Jane Farrall and Alex Dunn)

Touch Access
• Requires fairly refined pointing
• Multiple ways to point “gestures” may lead to errors
• Lacks features built into many AAC touch systems that would compensate for fine motor challenges

Switch Access
• Limited Sophistication / features, currently
• Currently, switches only work with Apps designed for switch access

Make-Shift Juke Box from Some Communication Apps

* For young children use short songs or parts of songs
* Switch Access
* Videos on some Apps
* Customize to personal preferences
* Mix them up
* Play song on other device or computer and press record on iPad App to capture

Partner-Assisted Scanning

* Partner scans items
* Mono tone voice
* Guard against partner influence
* Child indicates no, no, yes!
* Two responses because of apraxia

---

Pipe Cleaner Pointers

* Won’t activate screen
* Clarifies what is being scanned
* Helps focus visual attention
